Over 10,000 new cancer cases recorded

By Paulina Ndalikokule

THE Cancer Association of Namibia (CAN) has recorded about 10 408 new cases of cancer over the past three years. This was reported by CAN chief executive officer Rolf Hansen in a recent interview with Confidente.

According to CAN statistics shared by Hansen, out of the new cases recorded between 2015 and 2017, 5 565 were female and 4 843 male, including children and adults of all ages.

He said more than 40 children on average were diagnosed with different types of cancer each month. The children mostly have leukemia, eye cancer, and originate mostly from the northern parts of the country. He said out of the two cancers that mostly affect children, eye cancer has increased more rapidly and parents are advised to be the voice of their children.

Rolf Hansen

"We must look out for signs like swollen limbs or joints, bruises that do not heal, yellow eyes, loss of appetite, shortage of breath and shortage of energy, and if the child is constantly sick that means that there is something going on in the immune [system] of the child and could be cancer, leukemia especially," the CEO said.

In women, breast cancer is still the most common ailment with 1 439 cases reported, followed by 1 304 cases of women's reproductive system cancers including vulva, vagina, cervix uteri, corpus uteri, ovarian, placenta and others.

Hansen said reproductive system cancers are primarily caused by human papillomavirus infection, human immunodeficiency viruses and sexually transmitted diseases adding that not enough action has been taken on women reproductive health.

"This echoes what the First Lady [Monica Geingos] said the other day that we are not taking enough actions when it comes to women reproductive health. We cannot just screen for cervical cancer and HIV. We need to screen for the continuous STIs (sexually transmitted infections), take action and treat STI infections that are causing infertility, cancers

We must look out for signs like swollen limbs or joints, bruises that do not heal, yellow eyes, loss of appetite, shortage of breath and shortage of energy, and if the child is constantly sick that means that there is something going on in the immune [system] of the child and could be cancer, leukemia especially and diseases," he said. Statics also found that prostate cancer is on the rise, with 972 cases reported as the number of cases reported daily continue to mount. Henson said cancer in Namibia is more likely to affect black people, thus it is important to break the stigma of saying that cancer is for some race or age group.

"When we look at statistics, it is more affecting black Namibian citizens, so it is not a disease that is affecting certain people only or a women-only disease or an old person disease, everyone can get cancer," he said.

He added that CAN does not have statistics of people who died from cancer because as statistics are held by the Ministry of Health and Social Services and Ministry of Home Affairs. However in general he said death due to cancer is increasing, especially among patients who are HIV positive.

Hansen noted though that there has been some stabilisation in the last two to three years due to awareness. He added that the country is facing a challenging winter ahead, as bodies will need to fight both coronavirus and non-communicable diseases, such as cancer.

"I just want to advise Namibians to stock up on immune boosters like, vitamin C, oranges, lemons and vegetables. Go natural as much as you can and get closer to traditional healthy food, especially spinach, and stay hydrated," he stressed.

Doctors to get cancer, fertility training

By Paulina Ndalikokule

THE Merck Foundation plans to train more local doctors in the fields of cancer, diabetes and fertility care through the Merck Oncology Fellowship program, to build healthcare capacity in the country.

Rasha Kelej, chief executive officer of the Merck Foundation, recently launched a partnership with First Lady of Namibia Monica Geingos and the ministries of health and education in Windhoek.

The Merck Oncology Fellowship Program is a key Merck Cancer Access Program initiative, which focuses on building additional capacity through medical education and training. It also focuses on building professional cancer care capacity with the aim of increasing the limited number of oncologists in Africa and developing countries.

In Namibia, the Merck Foundation provided oncology specialty training to two Namibian doctors and two fertility doctors. "We plan to train more doctors in the fields of fertility, diabetes and cancer in partnership with the First Lady and Ministry of Health," Kelej said.

Launched in 2016, the Merck Foundation has trained over 80 oncology care specialists in 26 countries, including Botswana, Burundi, Cameroon, CAR, Chad, Congo Brazzaville, DRC, Ethiopia, Gabon, Ghana, Guinea, Kenya, Liberia, Malawi, Mauritius, Namibia, Niger, Rwanda, Senegal, Sierra Leone, South Africa, Tanzania, Uganda, Zambia and Zimbabwe.

In collaboration with African ministries of health, local governments and academies, Kelej said the program offers a one-year fellowship program in India, one-year and half-year oncology fellowship programs in Malaysia, a two-year oncology fellowship program in Kenya and two-year degree in medical oncology at Cairo University in Egypt.

"The lack of financial means is not the only challenge in Africa and developing countries, but a scarcity of trained healthcare personnel capable to tackle the prevention, early diagnosis and management of cancer at all levels of the health care systems is even a bigger challenge," she said.

The Foundation also runs a campaign called Merck More Than a Mother, which seeks to empower infertile women through access to knowledge, education and change of mindset, and supports governments in policy-making to improve access to regulated, safe and effective fertility care.

"It defines interventions to break the stigma around infertile women and raises awareness about infertility prevention, management and male infertility. With "Merck

More Than a Mother, we have initiated a cultural shift to de-stigmatize infertility on all levels. It's all about giving every woman the respect and the help she deserves to live a fulfilling life, with or without a child," she said. The Foundation works closely with the media, African First Ladies and women leaders to help childless women set up small businesses.

First Lady Monica Geingos is one of Merck's More than A Mother ambassadors. Geingos underlined that the campaign will break the silence of Namibian women who suffered from the infertility stigma. She also emphasized the critical role her office intends to play to be the voice of these women to empower them through advocacy, access to information and a change in thinking.

The lack of financial means is not the only challenge in Africa and developing countries, but a scarcity of trained healthcare personnel capable to tackle the prevention
