

FIGURE 4. The expansion of structured natural resource management across Namibia

At the end of 2013, land under structured natural resource management covered 43.5% of Namibia. At independence in 1990, there were no registered community conservation areas, freehold conservancies did not exist, and a mere 12% of land was under recognised conservation management.