

SAPS dismisses threats to stop it from arresting Zuma as meaningless

SHILE MAVUSO

With the dock ticking for former president Jacob Zuma to hand himself over to the authorities to be jailed, or face being embarrassingly frogmarched to prison, the SAPS has dismissed as meaningless threats by supporters of the former head of state to shield him from arrest – even at the expense of their lives.

In a response to several threats to lay down their lives to thwart the arrest, Brigadier Vish Naidoo, the national police spokesperson, said that when the time came they would do what they had to do, as empowered by the law.

Naidoo's comment comes as the tensions between Zuma supporters and the authorities took an unexpected twist yesterday – and worsened.

"Look, I am not going to comment on this. Zuma has until Sunday to hand himself in, so let the people say whatever they want to say."

"After Sunday, if he does not hand himself in there is five days for the minister of police and the commissioner of police to decide to hand him to a correctional facility. From then we will start commenting, not now," he said.

Upping the ante on Thursday and with more tension expected in the coming days, Zuma's supporters said they believed that he was the victim of a judicial system that was badly entangled in politics. One Zuma supporter, asking not to be named, said: "This is minor, our true strength will be seen from Sunday when we start gathering here (Nkandla) in numbers."

All this was triggered by a long-brewing spat between Zuma, the Zondo

Former SA president Jacob Zuma

Commission and the Constitutional Court. On Tuesday, the apex court sentenced Zuma to 15 months' prison for defying its order to testify before the Zondo Commission and answer all questions posed to him.

Tuesday's ruling sparked a war of words between Zuma's supporters and the authorities. Signs of tension started on Wednesday when the MK vets prevented a police van from accessing the Zumas' home. SAPS authorities downplayed that incident as "misinformation" by the media contingent that took the video and circulated it. In a dramatic escalation, yesterday Inkosi Bhelamuzi Zuma of the local Zuma clan joined a convoy of Zuma supporters who went to show their presence and pledge to thwart any arrest. The traditional leader, who refused to speak to Independent Media, together with another Zulu warrior whose name could not be immediately established, had guns hanging from their hips.

The regiments sang traditional Zulu war songs as they marched towards

After Sunday, if he does not hand himself in there, it's up to the minister of police and the commissioner of police to decide to hand him to a correctional facility. From then we will start commenting, not now”

Zuma's homestead. They sang Wathintu Zuma, udakwe stni - which loosely translates to "Why touch Zuma (Jacob), what has intoxicated you?"

Upon arriving at the home, they were allowed inside and continued to sing at the entrance of the home, and then moved to the open fields at its gates.

Speaker after speaker, from the MKMVA to leaders of the convoy and the church, vowed that Zuma would not be arrested.

Repeating the words of Zuma's son Edward, they said the authorities would have to get past them before they could arrest the former president. One of the who vowed that Zuma would not be arrested was Lindani Sicwala, leader of the convoy, who is also a known confidant of former eThekweni mayor Zandile Gumedle.

Sicwala advised police officers to post them in a helicopter.

"We will be here (in Nkandla) on that day (of arrest) comes. If they want to get inside they will have to use helicopter to fly past us because if we won't use this entrance while we are here," Sicwala said.

Bishop Sarelle Ndaba, a senior member of KZN Interfaith, also made a similar statement, adding that Zuma was being politically persecuted and, such, they would fight off any attempt to jail him. Dumisani Cele, who called himself a commander of the MKMVA, said Zuma should be defended and would bring shame to the people of KwaZulu-Natal to have the former head of state arrested without them putting up a fight. "As the MK we are saying this is enough. Enough is enough. What is happening to Nkandla (Zuma's home) shows that the law in South Africa is not being correctly applied, it does not protect his rights. So we are now saying if he is arrested, we will die here. That is what we are saying. At KwaZulu-Natal MK we are saying that if Nsamenang is arrested, we will die here... if something is happening to him, let us die," Cele said. Zuma's whereabouts remain unknown. Bishop Vusi Dube, one of the prominent organisers of his supporters' understanding was that he was still consulting his legal team on the way forward.

South Africa's Ruling ANC Postpones Executive Committee Meeting

South Africa's ruling ANC postponed a scheduled meeting of its high decision-making body weekend before the imprisonment of former President Jacob Zuma.

The Constitutional Court weekend sentenced Zuma to 15 months in jail for contempt of court. Thousands of supporters are gathered at Zuma's rural homestead Nkandla, KwaZulu-Natal province as he faces a deadline of handing himself over to the authorities Sunday.

"The national officials mindful of the situation developing in KwaZulu-Natal and the need for the ANC to give clear principled leadership to or the maintenance of the rule of law and to avoid any violence, or loss of life," the party said statement.

Defiant Zuma says S.Africa court convicted him without trial

STHEMBILE CELE

Former South African President Jacob Zuma, who is facing a 15-month jail sentence for contempt, accused the nation's top court of unfairly convicting him, and said he feared that the judicial system was being compromised.

"I'm very concerned that South Africa is fast sliding back to apartheid-type rule. I am facing a long detention without trial," Zuma told reporters at his rural homestead in Nkandla in the eastern KwaZulu-Natal province on Sunday. "I have a duty and obligation to ensure that the dignity and respect for our judiciary is not compromised by sentences that remind our people of the apartheid days."

Zuma ruled South Africa for almost nine scandal-marred years until the ruling party forced him to step down in 2018 to stem a loss of electoral support. The government estimates that more than 500 billion rand ($35 billion) was stolen from state coffers under his watch, and dozens of witnesses who've testified before an inquiry headed by acting Chief Justice Raymond Zondo have placed the ex-president at the center of the looting spree.

The Constitutional Court on June 29 found Zuma, 79, guilty of violating its order to testify before Zondo, but on Saturday it agreed to consider his application for the judgment to be reviewed and scheduled a hearing for July 12.

The former president also brought a case in the KwaZulu-Natal division of the High Court to have the Constitutional Court's decision rescinded. That will be heard on Tuesday. Lawyer's for Zondo's panel argued in an answering affidavit that the court has no jurisdiction to hear the case. Zuma, who refused to participate in the original Constitutional Court proceedings, denied having done anything wrong and said the tribunal failed to take his age and ill health into consideration when it decided to incarcerate him.

"I am not asking for sympathy but justice," he said. "If it was up to me, I would once again go to jail for my beliefs as early as today, whether I come out alive or not, but I have never operated as an individual and am therefore guided by views from my family and comrades."

Zuma didn't respond to a question as to whether he will hand himself in to the authorities should his review application fail. He called on his supporters to use peaceful means to protest against the injustice that he said he had suffered. A large contingent of his supporters, a number of whom carried traditional spears and stidias, gathered on Sunday outside his homestead and vowed to resist any attempt by the police to apprehend him. The sound of sporadic gunfire could be heard, but there were no immediate reports of violent clashes, injuries or arrests. bloomberg

TB Joshua's week-long burial procession begins tonight

CHAD WILLIAMS

CAPE TOWN, - The funeral procession of Nigerian pastor and televangelist TB Joshua is set to begin on Monday, with a series of services culminating in a thanksgiving service on July 11.

According to a statement issued by the Joshua family, Monday evening, July 5, will see funeral proceedings starting off with a candlelight procession at a private service.

Joshua, founder of the Synagogue, Church Of All Nations (SCOAN) mega church, died on June 5 after a live broadcast, leaving his wife, three children and millions of followers throughout the African continent.

The church confirmed that all services will be broadcast live on the Christian television network founded by Joshua, Emmanuel TV, as well as on online video-streaming service YouTube.

On July 6 to 7, tribute services will be held at SCOAN between 10am and 7pm and will be open to the public. This will include services of songs in addition to an all-night prayer service. Seating will be limited, to comply with Covid-19 restrictions.

On July 8, Joshua's body will be lying in state between 11am and 5pm at SCOAN and will be open to the public.

On July 9, the laying to rest and interment segment of the week-long burial proceedings will take place. This will be open to the public, again with limited seating capacity.

On July 11, a thanksgiving service will take place at SCOAN with limited seating capacity, which will mark the burial proceedings.

Punch Nigeria reported on Sunday that the Lagos State government inspected the facilities at SCOAN to ensure compliance with Covid-19 safety precautions in preparation for Joshua's funeral.

According to local media reports, state government delegation was led by the commissioner for health Prof. Akin Abayomi and the director-general of the Lagos State Safety Commission Lanre Mojola.

Interpol red notice for Zuma-linked Gupta brothers

South African prosecutors announced progress in bid to extradite Indian brothers who are accused of being at the centre of a large corruption scandal during Jacob Zuma's presidency.

The prosecution authority Interpol had issued a "red notice" against two of the Gupta brothers Anil and Rajesh - making it possible for them to be arrested and extradited.

They fled South Africa in 2011 and are thought to be in the United Arab Emirates.

A South African news site, ScoWorld, reports that the family has been trying without success to convince the government to issue their passports.

Three Gupta brothers have dealings with the family, including using their close links to Mr Zuma to gain contracts and embezzle assets.

President Cyril Ramaphosa estimated that $40bn (£29bn) was stolen from the state during Zuma's time in office.

South Africa failed to foresee deadly unrest

300 people died

President Cyril Ramaphosa tasked an expert panel with analysing his government's preparedness and reaction.

South Africa's police and intelligence services failed to anticipate and disrupt days of arson and looting last year in which more than 300 people died, a report into the unrest commissioned by the president and released on Monday found. The violence was sparked by the imprisonment of former president Jacob Zuma for defying a court order to testify at a corruption inquiry and fanned by anger over the poverty and inequality that persist almost three decades after the end of apartheid, read more. The government deployed soldiers to restore calm, but around R50 billion (US $9.2 billion) of damage was caused by one estimate as shops were ransacked and key infrastructure targeted. will take in response to the report. "There was a significant intelligence failure to anticipate, prevent or disrupt the planned and orchestrated violence," the report by the experts concluded. "The combination of poorly equipped police stations and inadequately trained police resulted in the police being overwhelmed and not being able to deploy sufficient and properly trained and equipped officers," it added. The experts said the executive branch of government, which comprises the president and his cabinet of ministers, "carries some of the blame too and must take responsibility for its lapse of leadership".

The report's authors said they had been told several times that "what appear to be factional battles in the African National Congress (ANC) have become a serious source of instability in the country". Ramaphosa and Zuma are from opposing factions in the ANC, which holds a leadership contest late this year at which Ramaphosa is expected to seek re-election. Ramaphosa's office said he would in a state of the nation address on Thursday spell out the first steps his government would take to act on the report's findings. -Reuters

UK consumers slowed their spending

British consumers slowed the pace of their spending last month as the Omicron Covid-19 wave hit fuel sales and kept people away from bars and restaurants, according to a survey which also pointed to the impact of rising inflation. Consumer spending was 74% higher than in January 2020 before the pandemic, the weakest increase since April last year, payments provider Barclaycard said. It said nine in 10 people it surveyed felt their household finances and discretionary spending were being impacted by the recent jump in prices. Britain's inflation rate hit a 30-year high of 5.4% in December and looks set to top 7% in April, according to the Bank of England which last week raised interest rates for the second time in two months and said further increases were likely. Jose Carvalho, head of consumer products at Barclaycard, said there were some signs of relief for the hospitality industry with people saying they planned to spend more on eating and drinking out in the month ahead. "The lifting of Plan B restrictions should also provide a welcome boost to many sectors, as workers travel back into the office and socialise over post-work drinks, while businesses will likely start to see the benefits of increased inbound tourism on retail sales too," he said. Advice to work from home, along with rules on mask-wearing and vaccine passes, were lifted in England on Jan. 26, six weeks after they were introduced. A separate survey published on Tuesday suggested a brighter picture for retailers - a narrower measure of consumer spending. Sales increased by 11.9% in January compared with the same month last year, the biggest increase since May last year, the British Retail Consortium said. -Reuters
