F1 title hanging in the balance after Lewis Hamilton wins in Qatar

Lewis Hamilton

Doha, Qatar - Lewis Hamilton won Sunday's inaugural Qatar Grand Prix with a commanding performance from pole to cut Max Verstappen's world championship lead to eight points and set up the kind of thrilling end this unforgettable Formula One season deserves.

The Mercedes seven-time champion comfortably held off his arch Dutch rival's Red Bull under the Losail circuit's lights to leave the battle for the F1 drivers' crown delicately poised with only two races remaining.

One week on from arguably his toughest and greatest win in Brazil, Hamilton enjoyed one of his easiest.

And after an unprecedented eighth world title appeared to be slipping from his grasp after Verstappen's wins in the USA and Mexico, it is the 36-year-old Briton rather than the 12-year-younger pretender who has the momentum.

"I can't wait to watch the race replay to find out what happened behind me," he said after his 102nd career win.

"It was pretty lonely at the front - of course I enjoy those races where you are battling through but we needed those points today.

"It's been a hell of a year. Back-to-back wins here, feel good, I feel fit, fitter than I've ever felt. Bring on the next two!"

Verstappen, who was demoted from second to seventh on the grid for a yellow flag infringement in qualifying on Saturday, took second, and picked up a point for the fastest lap.

"Our starting position was compromised, but luckily we had a really good start," he said.

"Of course, I know it's going to be difficult to the end but it keeps it nice, keeps it exciting. This track was fun to drive as well. I feel good, but it's going to be a tight battle to the end."

Hamilton's faster engine, fitted last weekend in Sao Paulo, will likely give Red Bull a tough time again at the ultra quick new circuit in Saudi Arabia in a fortnight's time ahead of the season-closing race in Abu Dhabi in mid-December.

Fernando Alonso took third for Alpine, the former two-time world champion's first podium since 2014, the grizzled 40-year-old getting a huge cheer from the crowd.

World Cup

The 20th race of the season was being held one year to the day to the start of the football World Cup in Qatar and the trophy was on display, as were some of the game's finest - David Beckham, Andrea Pirlo and John Terry getting a touchline view of how fast Hamilton takes corners.

Sporting the rainbow helmet he wore in practice and qualifying to raise awareness for human rights and equality, Hamilton got off to a dream start, quickly drawing away from the pack as Verstappen jumped up from seventh to fourth.

The charging Verstappen knocked off Pierre Gasly's Alpha Tauri to move into third by lap four, with Alonso falling shortly after to leave only Hamilton in his cross hairs.

With the new engine fitted before Brazil firing on all cylinders, Hamilton was leaving his Red Bull pursuer for desert dust.

Verstappen, trailing by nine seconds, was the first to pit on lap 18, resuming in second.

Mercedes covered that move, hauling Hamilton in on the very next lap with the Briton resuming with a lead of around eight seconds.

Like a game of shadow boxing, Mercedes carried out the same tactics the next time Verstappen pitted, leaving Hamilton to coast to victory and Red Bull puzzling over what they can do to keep their championship hopes alive.

Whilst there are numerous routes either driver can take to the 2021 crown, Verstappen will claim it if he wins in Saudi Arabia in a fortnight's time and Hamilton is out of the top 10.

Mercedes did not have all their cards fall kindly for them though this weekend as Valtteri Bottas picked up a late puncture to leave the Silver Arrows with only a five-point lead over Red Bull in the constructors championship.

Mashare farmers receive business training

■ Shoki Kandjimi

RUNDJARA – A programme by the German Agency for International Cooperation, Farmers Business School, recently awarded certificates to about 80 communal farmers in the Rundjara village in the Mashare Constituency of the Kawango East region.

This follows their completion of a five-day training on farming for resilience and entrepreneurship.

FBS was developed in 2010 as an innovative agricultural extension and training approach to promoting entrepreneurship and business skills among small-scale farmers in Africa. Communal farmers in the Rundjara village were the first recipients to benefit from this initiative in Namibia, which is also being offered in 24 African countries. Speaking at the farmers' graduation ceremony, Berry Mandla, the GIZ technical advisor at the Farmers Business School (FBS), said the programme has already started yielding positive results in the countries where the programme is being implemented.

He believes there will be a mindset shift among small-scale farmers in Namibia, particularly those in communal areas who go through this training.

"The advantages of this programme has been countries who implement it increase their production in the agricultural sector. The programme has also seen a change in the mindset of farmers, who change as they now start to realise that farming is a business,"

Manda said. One of the trainers Muronga Mukuve expressed his gratitude to FBS and the trainers for training them in becoming entrepreneurs in the farming sector. "I would like to thank the Farmers Business School team for equipping us with skills that will enable us to run our small farming businesses. It was never my expectation to be trained as a farmer; therefore, I am grateful for this programme."

Rape convict awaits appeal ruling

■ Maria Amakali

One of the two men tried for gang-raping a woman in Swakopmund says the court convicted him without a testimony of an eye-witness.

Chris van Wyk, through his lawyer Kalundu Kamwi, is seeking leave from the High Court to appeal his conviction in the Supreme Court.

Van Wyk, who was convicted on a charge of rape by Judge Claudia Classen, says the court convicted him without a witness to attest to the alleged sexual act.

"The issue of the sexual act, there was no witness who came on record that the sexual act did indeed occur," said Kamwi.

The act described by the State does not meet the requirements as stipulated in the Rape Act, he said. Van Wyk was convicted of having raped a 30-year-old woman at Swakopmund on 1 November 2015.

The victim, however, died before the trial started. State prosecutor Dominic Lisulo argued Van Wyk has no prospect of winning an appeal in the supreme court on the ground that there was no eye witness to the alleged crime.

He said the state had a strong prima facie case against him – and as such, he was convicted.

"No other court would come to a different conclusion in this matter on the grounds advanced by the defence. We seek that the matter be dismissed," said Lisulo.

During the trial, Van Wyk, through his then-lawyer Mbanga Siyomonjji, said he knew the complainant from before the incident – and they were together at a shebeen in Mondesa.

He further said the complainant agreed to have intercourse with him, and they went to the toilet to do the deed.

However, he said, due to the fact that they had no protection, and there were a lot of people knocking on the door, wanting to use the amenities, they abandoned the idea of having intercourse at the shebeen and instead decided to go home.

While they were busy with the altercation, the police arrived at the scene – and the four men ran away, he said.

He added that at that stage, he was sitting on the ground next to the complainant, and was not on top of her as one of the witnesses claimed.

He went on to say he was surprised when the police manhandled and arrested him, while he was a victim of assault and robbery.

His version was dismissed by the court.

The court is scheduled to give a ruling on 30 November.

New employment equity commissioners unveiled

OTJOWARONGO – Twenty-eight newly appointed members of the Employment Equity Commission (EEC) of Namibia yesterday officially received their appointment letters from labour minister Utami Nujoma.

The new members were appointed by Nujoma on approval of the National Assembly, and are expected to serve the commission for a period of three years.

They include 14 permanent or substantive members and 14 alternate members from trade unions, employer organisations, designated groups, women, people living with disabilities and the State.

Advocate Otriel Podewiltz is their chairperson.

Nujoma at the inauguration event reminded the new commission that the Employment Equity Commission of Namibia was created by the Affirmative Action (Employment) Act no. 29 of 1998) to guide employers in eliminating barriers against persons in designated groups with a view towards ensuring they are also equitably represented at all levels of employment.

"Your duty, as new members of this commission, is to ensure that the provisions of the affirmative action laws are effectively enforced, and employers bring about the overdue necessary transformations," he said. Nujoma encouraged the commission to see to it that workforce organisations reflect the demographics of the Namibian nation in job distribution, incomes and occupations.

On his part, Otjozondjupa governor James Uerikua called on the new members of the commission to see to it that all unfair labour practices allegedly taking place on privately-owned farms and in the charcoal production industry are done away with by the end of their three-year tenure.

The new commissioners will undergo an induction training course at Otjozondjupa until Friday. – Nampya Mukuve noted.

Another beneficiary of the programme David Maseka also expressed his gratitude, and encouraged his fellow farmers to maximise on the skills they received to generate an income for themselves and increase their production.

"We, the farmers of Rundjara village, are grateful for this opportunity granted to us. As you may be aware of our situation, we only used to farm for a living but never saw it as a business venture. Our minds have changed; we will now start thinking like entrepreneurs," Maseka said.

The programme is also envisaged to train value chain farmers in Kavango West, Kunene, Zambezi, Oshana, Oshana, Oshana, Oshikoto, Omusati, Omaheke and Otjozondjupa regions.

The other partners involved in the programme are the Ministry of Agriculture, Water and Land Reform, Namibia Agronomic Board, Namibia Training Authority, Red Cross Namibia, Agribank and AMTA.

Three die in two hit-and-run incidents

RUNDU – A 45-year-old woman died after she was run over by a vehicle while attempting to cross the Rundu-Nkurenkuru road at Siya village in Kavango West, while two men were fatally hit by a car at Rundu on Saturday night.

The accident at Siya happened at 19h00 on Saturday evening, while the driver didn't stop to render any assistance nor call the police.

According to the report filed by the police, it is alleged that the unknown driver of a white Toyota VVTi double cab with licence plate N126-092W, (bearing a sticker - Donated by USAID) was driving from Nkurenkuru towards the direction of Rundu when he bumped the pedestrian who was attempting to cross the road.

"The driver overtook a vehicle, and it was in that process that the pedestrian was hit. The deceased was identified as Josephine Kasitu Haiingura," said the Kavango West police commander, Josephat Abel.

The victim was a resident of Siya village, and her next of kin have been informed of her death.

"The driver is not known at this stage as he drove away after the accident, parked his vehicle at a nearby shebeen, locked the vehicle and fled on foot into the woods.

Investigations into the incident continue," Abel noted. In a similar accident, two men were bumped and died on the spot in Rundu's Sanyemwa location on Saturday night at around 22h00.

The 27-year-old suspect fled the scene without rendering support to the victims. Several passersby who saw the two victims lying next to the road alerted the police, but there were no traffic or police Worried... Kavango West police commander Josephat Abel, officers on standby to immediately respond to the incident. They only reported after waking up their regional commander Johanna Ngondo at 22h55, who sent officials to pick up the remains of the victims. They arrived at 23h30. The police at Rundu managed to arrest the suspect, a 27-year-old man, on Sunday morning at Ndama location. The vehicle he drove during the accident was a Mazda sedan.

The victims have not yet been identified, and the police have called on the public to identify them. In a separate incident, a fatal lightning strike took the life of a grade 9 learner from the Ntara Combined School in the Kavango West region on Friday at 06h45.

It is alleged that the deceased was struck by lightning whilst he was walking to school and died instantly. The deceased was identified as Phillip Kazana Siranda, aged 21.

He was residing at Muveve village, Kavango West and he was walking to Ntara village. His next of kin have been informed.

pandemic is worth appreciating. This is so because we all have seen the effects that have resulted from this crisis, of which the impact is still felt up to now," said environment minister Pohamba Shifeta.

He urged the beneficiaries to work hard and ensure effective delivery.

"I wish to urge all the grantees present here today that getting these grants is only the first step, but the overall expectations are much bigger than they may think. Therefore, hard work and dedication in ensuring effective delivery is expected from all grantees so that collectively we achieve the goals we have set ourselves," he added.

Chief executive officer (CEO) of EIF Remediet Libanda promised that they would do all they can to support the transition to a sustainable future, and want this transition to come fast. He indicated that the thinking behind climate change adaptation and sustainability is higher than before.

"For real change, you need real people on the ground, willing to work and account for the resources given to them. It is against this background that I would like to urge all stakeholders and implementing partners of the NILALEG Project to ensure that we hold one another accountable for the success of the project," noted Libanda.

Omaovipanga is one of the funded projects in the Kunene region, upscaling the adoption of climate-resilient rangeland rehabilitation and crop production in the vulnerable and dry land of the Okavango Kozomjeje Conservancy. This project received N$685 883 and will run for 24 months, benefiting about 14 850 community members. Kunene governor Marius Sheya applauded the initiative, indicating that the success of the project implementation is based on teamwork. "I am confident that if the NILALEG project is successfully implemented, it will result in a paradigm shift for our rural communities in the target landscapes, and subsequent positive project impacts for the region and other regions where it will be implemented. We simply cannot continue to do business as usual," the governor stressed.

Gerrard says it is 'unfair' to call Villa 'stepping stone' to Liverpool job

The 41-year-old has signed a three-and-a-half-year deal with Villa.

"I'm all-in and I will give this job everything that it needs for it to be a success. I'll be 100% committed and so will my staff," said Gerrard.

"[It's] very unfair and you'll never hear me saying it's a stepping stone. For me, I'm really honoured and proud to be in this position."

Former England captain Gerrard played 710 games and scored 186 goals for Liverpool during a 17-year career at Anfield, winning eight major trophies, including the Champions League in 2005.

"There is nothing wrong in football with having dreams and aspirations but Liverpool have got a world class coach [in Jurgen Klopp] that they are very happy with," he added.

"If he was to sign a lifetime deal right now, then I would be very happy for them and him." Gerrard will return to Anfield when his new side play Liverpool on 11 December and said Klopp had been in touch with him following his Villa appointment.

"He's a great man and a great coach. I think Liverpool are very lucky to have him at the helm and I'm a Liverpool fan so long may that continue," said Gerrard.

"He sent me a message and said he's looking forward to a big hug on the side on 11 December so it's something for me to look forward to."

"I want to put my own stamp on things"

Villa are just two points above the relegation zone after picking up 10 points from 11 games and go into Gerrard's first game in charge against Brighton on Saturday on the back of five consecutive league defeats. "It has been a whirlwind," Gerrard said. "It has been great to get on the grass with the players. We have had quite a few internationals away, I am looking forward to meeting the rest of them.

"We are going to play slightly different to what's been before. I want to put my own stamp on things, my own identity and our philosophy. That will take some time but you will see some changes at the weekend.

"It is a new start. A fresh start. I have told the players to impress me the best way they can on and off the pitch." He added: "The stats don't lie. I think at the moment Aston Villa are the eighth top scorers in the league, which shows you that we have very talented players in the forward areas. The creation has been OK but it can still be fine tuned and be better.

"But, at the moment, the club is conceding too many goals so it is quite clear that we need to tighten up, be more organised and harder to play against. When we do, I believe we will move up the league."

Saturday's opponents Brighton are seventh in the top flight but are without a win from their past six league games - a run that has included five draws - as manager Graham Potter goes into his 100th game in charge of the club. Asked about Gerrard becoming Villa boss, Potter said: "The top players have the potential to be the top managers and Steven's on that path. I think it's a fantastic appointment.

"No matter how good they are [Steven Gerrard and his staff], they have only had a couple of sessions so it is unfair to expect three years of Rangers from two sessions at Aston Villa.

"He is not going to fix the world in that time. You can analyse the past but it doesn't mean it will happen. We will do our best and be ready."

Steven Gerrard

Managing PSG players' moods and entourages is not easy - Pochettino

Paris St Germain manager Mauricio Pochettino said coaching the Ligue 1 side with “the best players in the world” was not easy as he had to manage their emotions as well as their entourages.

Pochettino was appointed by PSG at the start of the year in the hope the Argentine would guide the club to an elusive Champions League crown.

PSG enjoy an embarrassment of riches in attack with Lionel Messi joining forces with Neymar and Kylian Mbappe while Angel Di Maria, Mauro Icardi and Julian Draxler are also options, leaving Pochettino with selection headaches every week.

“We manage people with emotions, everyone’s behaviour is not a flat line. It’s a succession of ups and downs – one is happy, another is hurt, one is performing well, another not,” Pochettino told L’Equipe.

“I think the most important thing for the staff is to try to balance the moods.

“We must not forget that we have in our hands the best players in the world, but also their families, their media entourages, their followers. It’s not easy.”

PSG, who are 10 points clear at the top of Ligue 1 and play Nantes at home on Saturday, failed to defend the league title last season while they fell at the semifinal stage in the Champions League.

Pochettino, who was previously manager at Tottenham Hotspur and guided them to a Champions League final, said the requirements at the French side were vastly different, with an expectation of immediate success.

“PSG wants to win. To win the Champions League, the Championship, the Cup - all the matches. They didn’t come looking for us to build a project, asking us what we needed to develop our ideas, or what we like,” he added.

“We came here to adapt and to win, with the structure and characteristics of the players who are here.”

Ndombele: Antonio Conte calls on Tottenham midfielder to put his talent ‘into the team’

New Tottenham manager Antonio Conte has challenged midfielder Tanguy Ndombele to put his talent “into the team” and not just play for himself.

The France international, 24, is Spurs’ record signing but has failed to consistently perform since joining from Lyon for £53.8m in 2019.

Ndombele could start against Leeds on Sunday with Oliver

Skipp suspended.

“I have seen that many managers struggle about this situation, about the position,” said Conte.

“Tanguy has the quality. At the same time he has to understand that there is a team and he has to play into the team. I think it means that it is important to keep order and to do what the position asks you to do.

“For sure with Tanguy we are working. We are working very hard. He has to work much more than the others, because he has talent but he has to put this talent into the team for the best of the team, not for the single player.

“In my football, I have an idea and in this idea there are tasks for the players. Every single player has to know what he has to do. Otherwise, if every player just goes and runs around the pitch, I think it will be a mess.”
