A live maggot was found in a room of a 29-year-old man in the Wanaheda neighborhood in the capital on Friday night.

According to the crime report, Namibian police received a tip from community members and arrested the Namibian man in the Ogulumbashe settlement around 11pm.

"The live ieternagô has been handed over to the Ministry of the Environment, Forestry and Tourism who will release it back into the wild after evaluation," the report reads.

On Tses, five Namibian men (between 22 and 42) were caught on Saturday night at a roadblock with apparently springbok carcasses.

"Police found two springboks, a shotgun and a shotgun in their possession and arrested the five."

The police investigation continues.
