A suspected poacher was shot in the leg on the farm Kaliombo in the Karibib area on Sunday.

According to the Namibian police's crime report, the 65-year-old farm owner heard the dogs barking around 11:45 p.m. Security guards from K-Sapu informed him about suspected poachers on his property. The farmer went to investigate and saw three men with meat. The suspects were armed with axes and an axe. They also had three dogs with them. The suspects allegedly tried to attack the farmer. He fired his weapon in self-defense and hit one of the men in the leg.

The other two fled and the wounded man remained lying. An ax and ax were found in his backpack.

According to the police, he is a known poacher. The carcass of a chamois was found on the B2 main road. According to the police, the suspects were dropped off at the farm in a white van.

The investigation continues. – republikein@republikein.com.na
