

2 minute readJanuary 31, 20239:37 AM GMT+2Last Updated 10 hours ago

Namibia rhino poaching surged 93% in 2022

Reuters

[1/2] A southern white rhino is seen inside Nairobi National Park in Kenya, June 15, 2020. REUTERS/Baz Ratner/File Photo

WINDHOEK, Jan 30 (Reuters) - The number of endangered rhinos poached in Namibia reached an all-time high last year after 87 animals were killed compared to 45 in 2021, official government data showed on Monday.

Africa's rhino population has been decimated over the decades to feed demand for rhino horn, which, despite being made of the same stuff as rhino hair and fingernails, is prized in East Asia as a supposed medicine and as jewellery.

Advertisement · Scroll to continue

The Ministry of Environment, Forestry and Tourism spokesperson Romeo Muyunda said poachers killed 61 black and 26 white rhinos mainly in Namibia's largest park, Etosha, where 46 rhinos were found dead.

Register for free to Reuters and know the full story Register now

"We note with serious concern that our flagship park, Etosha National Park, is a poaching hotspot," Muyunda said, adding that the ministry and law enforcement officials have stepped up efforts against wildlife crime in Etosha National Park to curb poaching.

Latest Updates

- Pope condemns "poison of greed" stoking conflict in Congo
- Belarus president offers Zimbabwe trucks and tractors on state visit
- Nigeria's lower house approves extra $2.2 bln central bank loans to government
- Kenya's inflation slows further to 9.0% yr/yr in January
- UN experts seek probe into possible war crimes by Mali, Russia's Wagner

Rhino poaching has plagued southern Africa for decades, especially in neighbouring South Africa and Botswana, leading to anti-poaching programmes, including strict policing and de-horning, or removing horns from the rhinos as a way of discouraging poaching.

Elephant poaching in Namibia has, however, declined over the years, from a high of 101 in 2015 to a low of four elephants poached last year.