Teenager arrested for illegally hunting a warthog

Staff Reporter

THE Namibian police in the Otjozondjupa Region have arrested a 19-year-old suspect who was allegedly found in possession of a warthog carcass and was unable to explain how it came into his possession. The arrest was made at Farm Euros in the Kombat area on Saturday morning.

It is alleged that the suspect entered the farm without the owner's permission and "unlawfully and intentionally" slaughtered a warthog worth N$7,000, which was then found in his possession.

Meanwhile, the police at Oshikuku in the Omusati Region have arrested a 40-year-old suspect who was found in possession of a possibly stolen goat carcass. According to the police, the suspect was apprehended at Onampila village on Friday evening while in possession of the goat carcass and failed to explain its origin.

The carcass was already skinned when it was recovered by the police, but the skin was also recovered.
