The wrapped parcel was then opened and it was discovered that indeed, the parcel was a folded pangolin skin with two small two baby pangolin skins.

They were then asked to produce a licence or permit authorising them to possess pangolin skins, but they failed, resulting in their subsequent arrest.

The recovered pangolin skins were assessed by Zimbabwe National Parks and Wildlife Management Authority officials who said the compensation value of the three killed pangolins was US$15 000.

In her defence, Kafero told the court that she was merely a victim and was not aware of what her cousin sister was carrying.
