In order to achieve this, the servitude zoning/split zoning that was created by Resolution 296/09/2001 and Resolution 52/02/2008 needs to be cancelled; the entire Remainder of Portion 10/C/48 and also Portion 439/21/48 needs to be rezoned to 'industrial' with a bulk of 0.5 and lastly, the two properties need to be consolidated. Access to the Consolidated Portion will remain from D1491 and sufficient parking can be provided for on-site in line with the requirements of Council. Please take notice that the locality plan of the erf lies for inspection on the Town Planning Notice Board in the Customer Care Centre, Municipal Offices, Rev. Michael Scott Street, Windhoek and at the offices of Du Toit Town Planning, 4 Dr. Kwame Nkrumah Avenue, Klein Windhoek. Please note that any person objecting to the proposed use of land as set out above may lodge such objection together with the grounds thereof with the City Council (the Urban Planner-Town House, Fifth Floor, Room 516) and the applicant within 14 days of the last publication of this notice (final date for objections is 6 October 2025). 20 killed in Russian strike

KYIV, (Ukraine) - A Russian strike yesterday in Ukraine's eastern Donetsk region killed at least 20 people, Ukrainian President Volodymyr Zelensky has said in a social media post.

Moscow has claimed the industrial region as part of Russia despite not having full control over it, and Kyiv says the Kremlin has massed 100 000 troops at a key part of the front line for a fresh offensive.

"A brutally savage Russian airstrike with an aerial bomb on the rural settlement of Yarova in the Donetsk region. Directly on people. Ordinary civilians. At the very moment when pensions were being disbursed," Zelensky said in his post.

He added, "According to preliminary information, more than 20 people were killed."

The governor of the Donetsk region said 21 people had been killed and the same number of people had been wounded.

Zelensky posted an amateur video from the scene showing corpses strewn across the ground and a burned-out minivan near a playground, with personal belongings, papers, and shoes scattered all around.

AFP could not independently verify the images posted by Ukrainian officials.

Yarova, which is about eight kilometers from the front line, had a pre-war population of approximately 1 900 people.

Zelensky urged Ukraine's allies to issue a response to the attack.

"A response is needed from the United States. A response is needed from Europe. A response is needed from the G20. Strong actions are needed to make Russia stop bringing death," Zelensky added.

Alzheimer's: The undignified disease

Election fever heats up at Walvis

■ Eveline de Klerk

WALVIS BAY –With regional and local authority elections drawing closer, political temperatures are rising in Walvis Bay as rival parties gear up for what promises to be a fiercely contested battle for control of the harbour town.

Walvis Bay Rural constituency councillor Florian Donatus, who is currently restrained by the Independent Patriots for Change (IPC) will seek re-election and is set to be challenged by his constituency's administrative officer, Ruben Shikongo.

Local authority councillor Albertina Nkoshi will face Walvis Bay mayor Trevino Forbes for the Urban Constituency seat.

The two parties (Swapo and IPC) set the ball rolling last week by starting the selection of candidates for the upcoming regional and local authority elections, slated for November this year.

Swapo's Walvis Bay Rural district coordinator, Patrick Bathromeus, yesterday told New Era that they successfully concluded their primaries over the weekend. He said they fielded a mixture of youth and business figures in their quest to reclaim the harbour town.

Although the official list of results has not yet been released, Walvis Bay municipal workers Mina Hangula, Justy Moses, businessman Johny Doeseb and councillor Ephraim Shoji are among the candidates who made it onto Swapo's local authority list.

"We are happy with the candidates. They are indeed capable of helping us get Walvis Bay back," he said.

Meanwhile, IPC has fielded 20 candidates for the local authority elections, including deputy mayor Sara Mutondoka and councillor Olivia Andrew. Councillor Louis Kativa is the party's only candidate for the Swakopmund constituency, while Liza Hengombe and Moses Mbuti will contest the Omaruru candidacy. Profila Iyambo has been approved for Arandis, with Rudolf Tseibeb and Gerson Kuvare set to contest in Daures.

Not making a return this time are councillors Deriou Benson from Walvis Bay Urban and Victor Leroy.

IPC Erongo coordinator Aloysius Kangulu yesterday confirmed that the names had been vetted but said constituencies would still finalise their selections. "Various constituencies will now further exercise their democratic right and carry out the elimination process as per our constitution," he explained.

In a circular to IPC members, national general secretary Christine Auchamus indicated that the approved candidates would proceed to elections in their respective constituencies. "Internal elections will still take place where more than one candidate was approved. Final names must be submitted by 22 September," she said.

Globally, Alzheimer's remains one of the pressing health challenges, although it is rarely spoken about.

Alzheimer's disease is a progressive brain disorder that impairs memory, thinking, and daily functioning. It is the leading cause of dementia, accounting for 60 to 70%, and affects one in three people worldwide.

According to the World Health Organisation (WHO), an estimated 900,000 people aged 65 or older develop the disease each year. By the age of 85, the risk increases significantly. Women are particularly at risk, making up about two-thirds of all patients.

Imagine feeling lost in your own body. One day, you forget where you placed your keys, and the next you no longer remember the faces of your loved ones. This is the harsh reality of Alzheimer's disease, a neurocognitive disorder and the most common type of dementia. Alzheimer's is often called the "undignified disease", slowly stealing memories, independence, and identity.

Behind the scenes, occupational therapists across the world are working tirelessly to restore dignity, step by step, together with the support systems surrounding patients.

Alzheimer's develops gradually, usually in three stages. In the early stage, symptoms may include memory lapses, struggling to find words, or losing track of dates. The middle stage often brings confusion, wandering, difficulty recognising familiar people, and challenges with basic tasks. In the late stage, patients may lose the ability to communicate, walk, or eat without help.

Leading an awareness campaign is Karlien Burger, an occupational therapist and assistant lecturer at the University of Namibia (Unam), where she trains the next generation of occupational therapists (OTs). She also serves as an executive member in charge of promotions for the Namibian Association of Occupational Therapists (NAOT), coordinating campaigns to raise public awareness about the profession. Previously, Burger worked at a psychiatric hospital in Johannesburg, gaining firsthand experience with patients requiring specialised care. Today, she supervises students at Windhoek Central Hospital, ensuring their practical training aligns with the country's healthcare needs.

"Families should look out for repeated forgetfulness that disrupts daily life, changes in mood or personality, difficulty

Therapy... Senior occupational therapist and assistant lecturer at Unam, Karlien Burger, speaks about their campaign and the crucial role occupational therapy plays in the intervention for Alzheimer's disease. Photo: Heather Erdmann completing familiar tasks, or getting lost in familiar places," Burger explained. "These are not normal signs of ageing – they may point to dementia or Alzheimer's."

Namibia is not spared. According to WHO data, Alzheimer's and dementia accounted for 176 deaths in 2020, representing just over 1% of all deaths in the country. The age-adjusted death rate stands at 18.25 per 100,000 people, placing Namibia 79th in the world. Yet the real number may be higher, as dementia often goes undiagnosed – up to 75% of cases worldwide are missed.

Access to professional care remains limited. "According to the WHO's 2024 Systematic Assessment of Rehabilitation Situation in Namibia, there are 80 occupational therapists registered with the Health Professions Council of Namibia (HPCNA), with just 10 working in State hospitals and 70 in private practice," said Burger.

Families also deeply feel the impact. "One of the hardest realities," Burger noted, "is that loved ones must learn to grieve the living person – the mother, father, or partner who is still physically there, but whose memory and personality slowly fade."

Once referred, occupational therapists focus on helping patients and families adapt daily life. "Adult-proofing" the home is a crucial step: removing hazardous items such as loose rugs, labelling remotes or cupboards, and creating safe spaces for movement. Memory aids, photographs, and reminders can help patients stay oriented.

"The goal is not just safety," Burger emphasised, "but also preserving independence and dignity for as long as possible." She stressed that Alzheimer's is not just a medical condition, but a community disease. Neighbours, shopkeepers, and local friends all play a role. If someone is lost or confused, the community can alert the family or provide support, creating a safety net around the patient.

As part of their mission, the Occupational Therapy Department at Windhoek Central Hospital is running an awareness campaign for Alzheimer's. They are focusing on TV and radio interviews, as well as Instagram Live sessions, using these platforms to educate families on recognising early symptoms, seeking occupational therapy, and adapting homes to make daily life safer and more meaningful.

Through these efforts, the hospital's OT department hopes to remind Namibians that Alzheimer's is not only about forgetting, but also about remembering that care, compassion, and practical intervention can make all the difference – and, most importantly, that no one has to face this journey alone.

In the end, Burger insists, even in the hardest times, there can still be magical moments.
