Issue of Environmental Impact Assessment

On the issue of impact, the panel said that the impact assessment process is not a linear process. It is a process that evolves over time and is influenced by the complexity of the project and the availability of information. The panel also noted that the impact assessment process is a key component of the decision-making process and that it should be integrated with the project planning and design process.

The panel also discussed the importance of stakeholder participation in the impact assessment process. It noted that stakeholders should be involved from the early stages of the project and that their input should be taken into account throughout the process. The panel also emphasized the need for transparency and accountability in the impact assessment process.

The panel concluded by stating that the impact assessment process is a complex and evolving process that requires ongoing communication and collaboration between all stakeholders. It also noted that the impact assessment process is a key component of the decision-making process and that it should be integrated with the project planning and design process.
